

BUSINESS

Mirage Obtains ISO 14001:2015 Certification for Environmental Management System

By Staff
Thursday, May 11, 2023 12:15 AM

Jessica Rossetti, Mirage's chief sustainability officer, holds the certification, between Mirage CEOs Cristiano Milone (on her right) and Matteo Milone (on her left). The team involved in the Environmental Management System (EMS) surrounds them.

VARESE, Italy—Italian eyewear company Mirage has announced that it has completed the certification cycle for the creation and implementation of an Environmental Management System (EMS) and obtained ISO 14001:2015 certification. This certification comes after a three-year process. ISO 14001:2015 certification requires compliance with the most important environmental standards and represents a particularly significant milestone for the company, which specializes in the production of injection molded eyewear. The certification asserts that Mirage's EMS takes into account all environmental aspects and risks related to: energy and water consumption, air pollution and emissions, the choice of raw materials, waste management, investments in environmental responsibility, the use of chemicals, maintenance procedures and, finally, training and education activities.

In addition, the company has set targets ensuring a long-term commitment to reducing environmental impact. Current practices include investment in state-of-the-art facilities and energy-efficient processes that contribute to a more responsible use of resources and a reduced impact on the environment; continuous research and development of new materials to produce sustainable, recycled and recyclable eyewear; and staff training for an orientation toward ethical behavior in the workplace.

The ISO 14001:2015 standard is also directly and indirectly consistent with 12 out of 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) included in the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, adopted by all UN member states in 2015.

ADVERTISEMENT

Jessica Rossetti, Mirage's chief sustainability officer, said, "Mirage has evolved in accordance with its own DNA, confirming that aptitude for change that has always characterized it since the 1980s. Thanks to intensive teamwork and efforts, we have completed the certification cycle and set the course for precise and ecologically responsible actions.

"This is the first ISO certification we have obtained, and behind this achievement there has been a great deal of hard work: we have created a working team to manage all the environmental aspects, boosting the skills of internal resources which are supported by the expert team of Univa Servizi, both for the creation of the management system as well as for its implementation."

Cristiano Milone, CEO of Mirage, said, "For Mirage, the decision to certify the EMS came naturally, as only an analytical and transparent approach, in accordance with a standardized process, guarantees a credible and responsible commitment not only to the environment but also to our customers. The audits and certification carried out by an independent third party (SQS) has demonstrated to our partners and also to team members that our actions truly and concretely support our vision."

